Tapioca starch powder is a fine, white powder that is extracted from the cassava plant. Tapioca starch powder has a neutral flavor and a high viscosity, making it an excellent thickener for sauces, gravies, soups, and other food products. It is also used in the production of baked goods such as bread, cakes, and cookies, as well as in the production of noodles and other pasta products.

Tapioca starch powder is also used in the textile industry as a sizing agent, in the paper industry as a coating agent, and in the pharmaceutical industry as a binder for tablets and capsules.
